

Module I - Part 8
Action Step Plan

How to Develop a Healthy Relationship with Food

Copyright © 2020, Forward Fitness 360, LLC d/b/a/ Healthy Body Healthy Life

All rights reserved. No portion of this book may be used, reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including fax, photocopy, recording or any information storage and retrieval system by anyone but the purchaser for his or her own personal use. This book may not be reproduced in any form without the written permission of the publisher, except by a reviewer who wishes to quote brief passages in connection with a review written for inclusion in a magazine, newspaper or website and has written approval prior to publishing.

HealthyBodyHealthyLife.com

Professional Advice Disclaimer

The nutrition, exercise, and health information and activities described in this book were developed by the author and are to be used as an adjunct to improved health, fitness, and weight-loss. These programs may not be appropriate for everyone. All individuals, especially those who suffer from any disease or are recovering from any injury, should consult their physicians regarding the advisability of undertaking any of the activities suggested in these programs. The author has been painstaking in her research. However, she is neither responsible nor liable for any harm or injury resulting from this program or the use of the exercises or exercise devices described herein.

HOW TO DEVELOP A HEALTHY RELATIONSHIP WITH FOOD

Here's your success checklist:

☐ Don't get stuck by one or more these seven sabotaging behaviors:

- Attaching to an unhealthy nutritional dogma—I refuse to eat animal fats and proteins or eliminate gluten, dairy etc. from my diet
- Being unwilling to invest in good quality foods—Organic food is too expensive!
- Dieting—Counting calories, trying different extreme diets or "eating clean" for a week or so and going back to old habits
- Perfectionism and unrealistic expectations—It's all or nothing! I'm "good" for a while then I fall off track and can't get back on, so I give up!
- Accepting poor dietary choices as part of their identity—I have a weakness for sweets. I struggle with sugar cravings. I have a hard time saying "no" to desserts.
- Paralysis by analysis—Doing lots of research, but taking no action
- Social isolation—not creating a strong support system

$\square$ Let go of black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking about food—this is "black and white thinking" thinking about food—this is "good," this is "black and white thinking" the properties of the	oad" fo	r me.
Instead of thinking of foods as being forbidden or "bad" think of them as	non-id	leal.

- $\square$  Catch yourself when you use self-limiting phrases like "I can't/shouldn't eat that," "I'm giving up X," "I cheated." Remember...
  - It's not about "giving up" foods—it's about gaining vitality.
  - It's not that you can't eat something—you can eat whatever you want!
  - It's not about "cheating" when you go off your plan—it's about choosing to eat foods that make you feel good and support healthy living.

 $\square$  Stop feeding your mind with other "head trash" like:

- "I'm too busy to cook and plan meals"
- "I don't like to cook" or "It's too much work to cook healthy meals"
- "It's boring to eat clean all the time"
- "It's too expensive to eat organic foods"
- "My husband/my kids/ my family doesn't like to eat healthy"
- "My friends and family think eating organic, gluten-free is a fad"

☐ Observe your thoughts and language over the next week. What other stories are YOU telling yourself about food? Post your observations in the Support Community. Be ready to share during our next coaching session.

□ Live By the "80/20 Rule." Be 100% committed to the 80/20 Rule. After you've followed the 30-Day Elimination Diet and you've targeted foods that are not best suited for you, aim to at least 80% of your meals with clean, whole foods. This allows 20% for "non-ideal foods." For example, three meals per day equals 21 meals per week. 80% of 21 is about 17 meals per week to include clean foods. That leaves 4 (20%) of your meals or snacks for non-ideal foods. NOTE: Food allergies or sensitivities do NOT apply to the 80/20 Rule—continuing to eat these foods creates chronic inflammation, which leads to sickness and disease.
☐ Focus on making changes for yourself first. (Note: You're an example of what it means to be healthy in how you live your life. Want to inspire change in your spouse? Be the change you wish to see in your spouse. Respect your spouse's choice to join in as much as he wants or not at all—don't try to push it on him. You put stress on yourself and your relationship when you try to change someone else's habits—especially if they don't want to change.)
<ul> <li>□ Be aware of how you eat.</li> <li>"Chew your water and drink your food" (Do a chew test – how many chews</li> </ul>

- does it take to fully break down your food?)

   Have a "clean your plate" mentality?—use smaller plates.
- Eat before you get ravenous to prevent you from overeating..
- Eat your meals in peace (if you like to read or watch T.V. while you eat keep it light)..
- Take your time to enjoy your meals and eat slowly.